CAPTAIN ELBRIDGE L. HAWK SELECTED

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

At Grand Rapids, Michigan, Thursday, By Acclamation—Came Near Getting the Post In 1926—Was Defeated By One Vote At That Time—The Honor Comes To a Former Resident Who In 1861 Was Instrumental In Organizing Company A, 114th O. V. I., Which Enlisted In This City—Was Well Known Here

Elbridge L. Hawk, of Sacramento, California, was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the public by the acclamation at Grand Rapids, Michigan, Thursday. This is the first time that a G. A. R. commander has been elected from the Pacific coast.

Denver was chosen as the site of the 1928 encampment.

Hawk enlisted April 22, 1861, as a private in Co. G, 18th Ohio and reenlisted in September in the same regiment.

Later he organized Co. F, 114th Ohio, and was made first lieutenant. He was promoted to captain after the first battle and was senior captain at the close of the war when he was detailed to assist in mustering out troops at New Orleans after his regiment was discharged.

He served on several national councils of administration, as department commander of the department of California-Nevada, and assistant adjutant general.

Major General John C. Clem of Washington D. C., withdrew from the race when the nominations were made, leaving the vote for commander between Hawk, John T. Reese of Broken Bow, Nebraska; Frank Cole of Jersey City, Patrick Coney, of Topeka, Kansas, and Samuel Town, of Philadelphia.

After the vote, both Cole and Town withdrew in favor of Hawk. It was then moved by Cole that Hawk be elected commander by acclamation.

Election of commander came after hours of haggling over Commander-in-Chief Frank A. Walsh's indictment of The National Tribune G. A. R. organ, which he declared should be made to account for $23,000 collected from veterans and the widows of veterans in support of the Bursum pension bill.

"The dignity of the Grand Army of the Republic requires that its aims and achievements should be held free of anything resembling scandal and since The National Tribune has persistently sought to create the impression that it is the only publication representing the interests of the Grand Army, the organization has permitted itself to become responsible for the acts of that paper," the commander said.

Altho no action was taken it was expressed that a committee should be appointed to investigate.

Only three cities were balloted upon for convention next year, Portland, Maine, lost to Denver, by 26 votes, with Wichita, Kansas, third.

Calvin A. Brainard, of Buffalo, was unopposed for senior vice commander. The offices of junior vice commander, chaplain-in-chief and surgeon general will be voted on Friday.

Walter Marble, of Philadelphia, was elected commander-in-chief of the Sons of Union Veterans and D. B. Boelwy, San Francisco, senior vice commander-in-chief.

Mrs. Margaret L. Watters, Woburn, Massachusetts was named national president of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans organization and Cora Swartz Indianapolis, national vice president.

Captain E. L. Hawk, who was honored by being raised to the post of commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., is well remembered in this city, as at one time he was in business here, later moving to the west. He is now a resident of Sacramento, California where is heavily interested in the raising of vegetables and fruits. His holdings were recently taken over by a syndicate and he is not actively engaged as he has retired with a competence.

The report of his election was good news to James Graham, of East Mound street, who is a personal friend of the newly made commander-in-chief. He and Captain Hawk served in Company A, 114th regiment, O. V. I. This company was mustered in at Camp Circleville on the David S. Ludwig farm. John Lynch was the first captain of the company and later Mr. Hawk was elected captain and returned with the boys to this city when the company was mustered out.

In September, 1922, the last reunion of the regiment was held on the old camp ground. Captain Hawk came here from the Golden State and made arrangements to entertain all the Civil war veterans. He paid the expenses of the reunion out of his own pocket.

At the same time he presented all the members of the Woman's Relief corps and the veterans a metal souvenir, bearing the picture of Colonel John H. Kelley, commander of the regiment.

Captain Hawk is expected here in a few weeks.

ACCUSED OF MURDER

OHIO'S BANK DEPOSITS FIND NEW HIGH TOTALS.

Deposits in the more than 100 national state and private banks of Ohio are continuing their meteoric climb to new high totals.

Having passed the $2,500,000,000 mark during the first quarter of 1927 money on deposit in these banks accumulated at an even more rapid rate during the three months during June 30, it is shown by a study just completed by the Ohio Bankers' association.

On the books of Ohio banks at that time were listed deposits amounting to a total of $2,591,637,788.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Thursday night Majors Temple, No. 516 Pythian sisters, held its regular meeting which was well attended. After the meeting an entertainment was in store, which consisted of an automobile party. Partners were chosen by matching parts of automobiles. Games were played, and miniature autos and balloon tires in candy were given as prizes. Those winning prizes were Snow Dreisbach, Phoebe Brown, Mary Alice Manson, Charles Stofor, Cleo Brown and Alice May. Marie Manson and Charley Leist had an auto race and Marie, who was driving a Hudson, came out as winner, as all Hudsons do. After the contest each party was given one gallon of gas and a spare tire, and started on their way home.

First Corkscrews

The first corkscrews ever seen in Palestine were taken there by a Yankee trader. They were a patented type and their handiness delighted every one. Etched on them was the legend, "Pat. August, 1858." GAS EXPLODES BABY KILLED AT COLUMBUS

Cigaret Comes in Contact With Gasoline Being Poured into Car For Trip.

A gasoline explosion Thursday night caused the death of William Junior Klinkert, 2, of near Columbus and probably fatal burns to his sister, Mildred, 5.

Another child in the family, Walter, 16, was less seriously burned.

The tragedy overtook preparations for an automobile trip from the Klinkert tenant home on the Carson farm in East Livingston road, four miles southwest of Reynoldsburg.

Gasoline was being drawn from a tank for the car when a cigaret tossed near fluid that had leaked to the ground, caused a flare and explosion that wrecked the car and sent the three children rolling on the ground their clothing afire.

William Klinkert, father of the children, succeeded in extinguishing the flames and called for aid.

William Junior died a few hours later at home. The others were taken to Grant hospital by neighbors.

Mildred has slight chance for recovery, hospital authorities said.

Funeral services Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Chrysler, 3658 East 11th avenue. Interment at Gahanna.

Sweet Clovers Are Variable
Offer Opportunity for Development of New Strains for Definite Uses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
All sweet clovers are variable in their habits of growth, and many individual plants of distinct type and form may be found in nearly any sweet-clover field. This offers an opportunity for the development of new strains of sweet clover for definite uses, according to L. W. Kephart, forage crop specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Better Hay Varieties.
There is considerable interest at present in the production of better hay varieties, he says, since the common sweet clovers, especially the white-flowered species, are too coarse and heavy to make good hay from the second year's growth. Several good hay varieties have already been developed, notably the early flowering Grundy County, Crystal Dwarf and Early Dwarf varieties of white sweet clover, and the Alborea and Switzer varieties of yellow sweet clover. Recently a type of sweet clover bearing many more and finer stems than the common sorts was found at two of the western Canadian experiment stations. It resembles alfalfa so closely that it is easily mistaken for that plant. This important discovery will no doubt add a distinct new type of forage plant to the present list.

The need for winter-hardy types has been met with the Arctic, or Hansen's Siberian, a white-flowered variety from western Canada. A sweet clover much better suited than the common sorts to the cold, dry climate of the northern Great Plains appears to have been developed at the Redfield (S. D.) field station of the United States Department of Agriculture.

On Acid Soils.
Several persons are endeavoring to find a sweet clover that will grow on acid soils, lack of lime being a serious hindrance to culture of the crop in many localities. Still others are trying to develop a strain suited to the drought and hot winds of the southern Great Plains.

A type of sweet clover that would be exceedingly useful, according to Mr. Kephart, is one that would remain green late in the fall, start growth early the next spring, and remain green and in good feeding condition well into the following summer. A number of experimenters, both on farms and at experiment stations, have approached this type with selections of common white sweet clover. Perhaps even better results will come from tests now being made with species and varieties brought from Europe and eastern Asia, one such species this year having remained green six weeks later than any sweet clover heretofore grown.

Sweet Clover Doubles Wheat Yield in Dakota

J. M. Miller, who farms 1,800 acres in North Dakota, is an enthusiast when it comes to sweet clover. "Sweet clover," said Mr. Miller, "is the greatest soil builder ever discovered. One year I had a field of wheat. Half of this field had been in sweet clover the previous season. We took a crop of seed off of it and a large amount of hay, and then plowed the rest under. That part of the field which had been in sweet clover produced 35 bushels of wheat per acre. The other part produced 12 bushels per acre. The same variety seed was used and other conditions were similar.

Agricultural Facts

Soy beans with corn is an insurance against an imperfect stand.

Cull the slow-maturing pullets. They will be cull hens when they grow up, if they ever do grow.

The glazed stage is right for harvesting silage, but frosted corn makes inferior silage; better harvest too soon than too late.

Prices of dairy cattle are on an up-grade and they probably will continue to rise until about 1931 when they will reach the peak.

Silos are not expensive structures, so feeding capacity can better be enlarged by increasing the number rather than the size.

It is best to use an early nurse crop with sweet clover the same as with other legumes and the nurse crop should be sown thin.

Never take the chances of putting a slightly defective specimen in a plate of fruit or vegetables for an exhibit. The judge is more than likely to find it.

It pays to ring-face baskets of peaches, pears, or apples because then each fruit in the face gets its share of the pressure from the cover. Too, the package sells better because it is more attractive.

SYNTHETIC AGE

Germans Claim to Have Discovered Substitute for Gasoline.

German dispatches announce that synthetic gasoline is to be placed in the market at once; that an experimental plant in the lignite fields has proved so successful that "conservative authorities" predict that one-fifth the nation's needs will be met next year and that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has just signed a contract by which it co-operates in the development of the process. Officials of the New Jersey Standard state that one of the principal objects of President Teague's visit to Europe was to study the German discovery and acquire rights in it. A European expert speaks of "a new fuel era."

Perhaps the first glowing reports are to be discounted, but here at any rate is the evidence of another step in the production by chemical engineering of basic materials of commerce formerly obtained only from natural sources. Everyone knows how chemistry takes nitrogen from the air and dyes of all hues from coal tar. In the last two or three years synthetic ammonia, synthetic wood alcohol and synthetic acetic acid have demoralized the markets for the commodities. The production of rayon and other synthetic textiles has increased astonishingly. Synthetic lacquers are capturing the automobile industry. Synthetic production of gasoline and oil by-products from coal has always been recognized as not merely a possibility but a necessity as soon as petroleum fields began to ebb. Now, apparently, it is to begin at once to play a large part in the industry of nations which, like Germany, have no petroleum deposits.—New York World.

Chic Fall Frocks for School Girls

Youthful and Smart Costume of Vital Importance to Young Miss.

The problem of clothes for school girls is one of the most important matters that faces the average household each autumn, for being well-dressed at school is half of being happy. The average girl finds it a very comfortable feeling to know that she looks right, and a misery to wear a dress she feels is even just a little wrong.

Being exactly right is not easy. A mere belt may spoil the whole effect these days when smartness counts for more than prettiness. Yet the smarter the clothes the more simple the lines, which means that dresses, even woolen ones, are easy now to make. It is just a matter of choosing the right pattern, one appropriate for the wearer's age and type.

The dresses shown herewith were chosen for the school wardrobe by Jane Warren Wells of the fashion staff of Farm and Fireside Magazine. They are youthful, they are smart, and the girl who wears them will feel well-dressed for almost any occasion.

In choosing the material Miss Wells finds that the new fall fabrics have "honest dignity." There are plain tones of warm brown and tan, dull red and navy blue, even black. The newest prints are small and of geometrical design chiefly. They seem to be a little more pronounced than the designs of early spring, yet they are subdued enough to be appropriate for frequent wear.

Among the woolens and fine cottons, checks and plaids abound. The fine woolens have many interesting weaves that add to their attractiveness, especially for the tailored dress. Plain flannels and kashas promise even greater popularity for the fall than they had during the spring.

Accessories are of course a part of every costume, and a most important part they play in the business of being well dressed. This fall, no matter what accessories you buy—shoes, hat, bag or hose—consider they are to be unusual in their simplicity. Nothing else counts so much.

In footwear, tan, light brown and black kid shoes have promised to be favored for conservative wear. These are really new because they have been out of fashion for two seasons, now.

Stockings have taken on a little darker tone for fall. They are just faintly lighter in color than the dress itself, except of course where the dress is very dark, then the stockings may be two shades lighter. Sheer stockings are worn for evening with the old yet once again new satin slipper. Satin is gaining favor over dress slippers of other types.

The slip-on glove, as simple as it can be made, is the order of the day. Wash chambray and hosiery are appropriate for school wear, the heavier kid slip-on for hard service.

The small hat continues popular, yet many hats boast a small, flattering brim. The small antelope purse with shell or narrow metal top is chic and interesting and plenty large enough. For evening a shawl is the most attractive wrap the college girl can have.

Crystal beads seem to be the latest fashion but the younger girls are still showing their preference for pearls.

Umbrella Compartment in Under-the-Arm Bag

Paris, which is so used to rainy weather, has thought up another clever way of carrying the indispensable umbrella, or "en cas," as they call the short combination umbrella-parasol which accompanies the Parisienne during the months when rain is to be expected. This time the "en cas" occupies one compartment in a double bag intended to be carried under the arm. The top compartment has the usual fittings, purse, vanity case, mirror, card case and so forth, and directly beneath this is another pocket which accommodates the very short umbrella whose silk matches the leather of the bag. This unusual novelty comes in various colors and in the finest quality of ecrase leather.

THRIFT MEANS
COMPETENCEOne of the Greatest Tragedies is to Become Dependent in Autumn of Life.It can not be denied that the practices of thrift mean personal inconvenience at times. They mean that the truly thrifty man or woman must sometimes surrender the soft comforts and alluring pastimes which mean so much to many.But it is much better to give up a few of these things during the years when we are strong and in good health than to face poverty and distress when our old years are upon us.Thrift is an investment in happiness that pays large dividends.Present pastimes last for a day and are forgotten but the joys of thrift abide with us as long as we live.Thrift is an insurance policy against failure.Those who practice it consistently and truly may not gain the great heights of success but they will always hold an honored, respected place in the affairs of men.One of life's greatest tragedies is to become a dependent in the autumn of life. Life's most poignant source of worry to many is the fear that when they shall have reached old age they shall be dependent on the pieness and contentment of mind to bounty of others.Conversely, there is constant hap-tose who practice thrift because they know that the serene days of old age will be lived in financial independence.There is a world of difference between the outlook of those who are making no provision for the future and those who are slowly, steadily building up their personal resources.
The difference is so great that one wonders how it is possible for any sensible person to drift along to certain failure when a comparatively small effort and sacrifice will place them on the roadway to independence.THE PRESIDENCY.One hundred and twenty million people are quadrennially convulsed in order to decide who is to have the honor of ruling them for the next four years. Hardly have they elected one president than they begin thinking of who is to succeed him.
Hardly have they become used to one man in the White House than he announces that he does not choose to run again, or somebody else steps in from the opposite side political camp and a new administration is installed with a new point of view of doing things. The excitement and the uncertainty seem to suit the Americans.
They prefer the bustle of change where we prefer the quiet of stability."But there is one thing the presidential system nearly always lacks—it lacks interest. Even if the choice of the electors fell on super-men instead of on the more or less amiable mediocrities who usually reach the White House, there would still be hardly time enough to get into human touch with sympathy with them before they disappeared for evermore from the official stage. The Americans do their best to manufacture an interest in their presidents, and for purposes of home consumption they frequently succeed. But can anyone imagine a Filipino, for instance, knowing anything or caring anything about the fugitive personalities who flit across the White House screen?
He sees their names at the bottom of proclamations, but they mean nothing to him, have no associations either personal or traditional, and might just as well, so far as he is concerned, be a row of figures instead of letters."—The Sunday Times, London.Long Family HomesteadCoursing westward toward Manchester, Conn., along an old highway at Ellington, the tourist's eye is caught by a dignified square brick house of a former period. If curiosity leads him to make inquiries, he will learn that this place, since 1717, has been the Pinney homestead, where seven successive generations of the family have lived and that the only deed ever given to the property is the one that the first settler of the town, Samuel Pinney, took from the Indians before building his log cabin in that year.Relatives Kill MurderersIn Abyssinia murderers are executed in a little hut wherein they are tied to a post, rifles are trained on them through tubes in the wall, and the triggers are pulled by relatives of the murdered man.PROGRAM "HOMECOMING"

Indians' Vanity Shown by "Fake" OrnamentsThe ancient Indian chiefs whose bones lie buried in Ohio mounds were not above making and wearing artificial jewelry when the natural materials were not readily available.
Investigation of the relics of the so-called "Hopewell Culture," by Dr. H.
C. Shetrone of the Ohio State Archeological and Historic society, has disclosed a number of bone ornaments accurately and artistically carved in imitation of bear teeth. Bear-tooth necklaces were highly prized by this long-buried people. They accompany many of the more important burials.
Only the long, tusklike eyeteeth were used, and the larger ones were frequently inset with river mussel pearls as big as peas. Most of the teeth are of the common black bear, which ranged throughout North America, but frequently specimens are found of undoubted grizzly bear origin, which must have come by primitive trade routes from as far away as the Rocky mountains.IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Wolves Threaten IndustryPatagonia, which is one of the great centers of sheep breeding, is in terrible trouble because of packs of dog-wolves which are destroying sheep by the thousand. These creatures are crosses between the native wolf and cootes that have run wild. They have little fear of man and, indeed, have killed many shepherds. They are doing such terrible damage that the export of wool and mutton from Patagonia is rapidly decreasing.Economical TypewritingLong-distance typewriting is a new

AUBURN CAR RECORD

One of the Quaker Oats demonstration cars was in our city Thursday. This car has built into it a miniature of the famous system "FOODS SHOT FROM GUNS."

Mr. LeRoy Myers, the manager of the Quaker Oats demonstrating fleet was with the car and informed us that it is one of nine AUBURN cars used for this purpose and has traveled over the entire United States and into Mexico. This car has run over 135,000 miles and the Quaker Oats company is so very much satisfied with AUBURN service that they have ordered three more new AUBURN Eights for the same purpose.

HAMMEL MOTORS, of our city, has the sales agency for these exceptional cars.

Street of Money Kings

The center of the money power of the United States got the name Wall Street because so many of the large financial establishments are situated on Wall street, New York. This street got its name from the fact that in 1635, under the Dutch governor Peter Stuyvesant, a wall was built there to protect New Amsterdam from attack from the north.

AMUSEMENTS

Mae Murray, petite screen star, has added a new word to the English language.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, who looks as if she should think of nothing more serious than what gown she is going to wear with what shoes is really one of the cleverest women in the motion picture or any other business, and during the production of "Altars of Desire," now playing at the Met theater, discovered that the language was sadly lacking in one respect.

Someone on the set mentioned a certain scene that was being taken with regard to its "audience angle."

It suddenly occurred to Mae that "audience" is no word to use in connection with a group of people viewing a motion picture, for Webster defines "audience" as being "a group of listeners or hearers."

"Audience," is taken from the Latin, audire, meaning to hear," says Miss Murray, "so why not follow the precedent and by using the Latin word videre, to see, the natural English derivation would be 'vidience.'"

If you are a real movie fan you will never mention a "motion picture audience," again, for you will not be in style and you will be essentially wrong. "Vidience," of course, is but a suggestion, and if anyone has a better one, Miss Murray is willing to hear it.

Conway Tearle has the featured male lead opposite Miss Murray in "Altars of Desire," which was directed by Christy Cabanne. The cast includes Maude George, Robert Edson and Andre Beranger.

Smart Men Marry

An analyst says that married men are smarter than single ones. Maybe they have to be to get away with it. The idea is not that smartness was indicated in the marrying but was developed in the school of experience. It takes a smart man to maintain a wife in the manner to which she has accustomed herself.

Lots in a Name

"All I have to do with my high-toned daughter is to kid her along," mused the diplomatic Mrs. Applegate. "If I ask her to do 'housework' she glares at me, but she'll mop the floors and wash the windows if I call it 'domestic science.'"—Farm and Fireside.

Economizing for the purpose of being financially independent is one of the soundest indications of manly character. However to economize does not necessarily mean to do without the things you would like to own. Consider the great saving that may be effected by shopping around for best prices and paying cash as you go.

The City Loan Plan enables you to buy with cash, save money and build up a sizable bank account. From that time on your progress toward financial independence is rapid—you always seem to have money when you need it. This has been the experience of hundreds of City Loan customers, who could testify to the worth-while character of our service.

SOVIETS HIT AT
HEAD OF MOSLEM*Russians Attack Islam in Samarkand, Quaint City of Central Asia.

Washington. — Samarkand, venerable city of central Asia, has been the scene of a series of recent clashes between the Soviet apostles of modernism and the conservative religious leaders of Islam.

The quaint city with the melodious native lies about 250 miles southwest of Tashkent, Turkestan, on the Trans-caspian railroad.

Perhaps nowhere in the Moslem world, except Mecca, could the Russians have invaded a more hostile territory to attack Mohammedanism, says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society. According to ancient legend, Samarkand was the head of Mohammedanism and Mecca the heart. Two Arab missionaries visited this region. Hungry, they cut up a sheep and put it on the fire to roast. While the meat was cooking they planned their work. They agreed that the one drawing the sheep's heart from the pot should go to Mecca, and that the one drawing the head should remain at Samarkand.

Samarkand is more than 6,000 years old and once had a population of more than a million. Today it has fewer than 60,000 inhabitants. The Persians once called it the hub of the universe. When Alexander the Great destroyed it, in 329 B. C., it was a prosperous city surrounded by a nine-mile wall, pierced by nineteen gates.

Famous Public Square.

After the Russians took the city in 1868, they built a new city outside its western limits. A long, wide boulevard, shaded by tall poplars, now separates the two settlements.

The native city is a labyrinth of narrow, crooked, dusty streets, bordered with dirty mud walls of courtyards and one-story houses. In the business blocks cluster dilapidated booths, cluttered with edibles and garments. Bearded men and veiled women crowd the streets, dodging camels, donkeys, droskies and high-wheeled carts, all mud-brown from the dust, while peasants, laden with produce from their farms and gardens, plod along to the public square.

Samarkand's registan, or public square, is one of the most famous in the world. It is the market place, parade ground and meeting place for the inhabitants for demonstrations of rejoicing and protest. Paved with cobblestones, it is inclosed on three sides by mosques where young Moslems are educated. The huge polychrome tile facades and melon-shaped towers, flanked with minarets 175 feet high, are splendid examples of Arabian architecture. Surrounding the courtyard inside each mosque are schools in whose cloisters, 10 by 12 feet, the students live with their instructors.

The fourth side of the square is occupied by ramshackle booths of odd pieces of lumber or tin, or strips of canvas on tall poles. They are filled with vegetables, fruits and other commodities. Near by are other booths where squatting natives sip coffee, smoke cigarettes, and gossip. As a public information bureau the oriental cafe serves the purpose of newspapers. Fortune tellers, professional letter writers and peddlers ply their professions where they find a shady place to sit. The registan also is the Samarkand employment agency.

Brilliant Garb of the Men.

From an elevated position above the surging mass of humanity the riot of color suggests that the natives vie with the rainbow and each other. A man will go hungry for a single garment of brilliantly colored material. Green, red, purple and yellow in all their hues will be seen on the same garment.

In a secluded spot in the old city, perhaps a half mile from the registan, is the tomb of the mighty Tamerlane, conqueror of Asia. It is an architectural gem, its graceful peacock blue dome rising above the dusty treetops.

A large park in the center of the Russian quarter is the hub of the new city, from which wide, well-shaded streets radiate in all directions. They are all paved to the city limits. Then they become mere trails in the desert. Some pass through masses of ruins of Samarkand when it was at the height of its prosperity. One of these roads leads to the citadel, situated on a hill between the two cities. Its wall incloses a subterranean prison, an immense dark chamber about 30 feet deep. Prisoners were let down by ropes and it is said no one ever came out of it. Grooves worn by the ropes can still be seen. The Russians abolished the old-fashioned method of punishing the offenders and have built clean, wholesome and well-ventilated jails.

AUBURNBreaks Closed-Car 2,000-mile Record

Then during night skidded in rain storm, turned over several times, received body repairs only

Then Finishes 15,000-miles at 62.709 M. P. H.

For more than 30 hours, averaging better than 65 miles an hour, this strictly stock Auburn Sedan had been whirling around the Atlantic City Speedway day and night.

Then came a terrific rain storm. Wet track. At 70 miles per hour the driver dozed, the car crashed.

Radiator and body repairs were made. Seven hours had been lost. But the Sedan went back into the test with the same driver. It caught up with the other two Auburn stock cars and finished the unprecedented distance of 15,000 miles.

After the accident, the car was declared non-stock, as it was no longer complete—exactly as sold, but its time continued to be officially recorded by the A. A. A. The longest, hardest and fastest official test ever given a closed car.

Unheard of as this performance is, it was only an incident in the 42,000 miles of official stock car test Auburn conducted, breaking all records for completely equipped stock cars from 5 to 5,000 miles, and establishing new stock car records from 5,000 to 15,000 miles.

The purpose of this extreme and hitherto unattempted stock car test, was to demonstrate by three times greater proof the supreme leadership of Auburn cars in speed, endurance, durability and efficiency. Your Auburn dealer has exact duplicates of the Auburn cars that made these phenomenal records.

Drawing made from actual photograph. The Auburn Sedan, one of the three fully equipped stock cars in the Atlantic City Speedway endurance test. It broke a new record of 70 miles an hour after breaking closed car 2,000 mile record at 65.533 miles per hour.

Drawing made from actual photograph. About the middle of the second night of this continuous run, when the track was wet as a result of a rain storm, the driver dozed, the car going at high speed skidded. It hit the guard rail and turned over. The sturdy construction of Auburn resisted this smash so well that only body damages resulted. The driver was unhurt.

Drawing made from actual photograph. Here is proof of stamina. After 7 hours for photographs and body repairs, this sedan went back into the endurance test, driven by the same driver, and finished the remainder of the 15,000 miles at an average speed of over 62 miles an hour for the net running time for the entire distance.

G. A. R. AGAIN IS REVIEWED

Thinning Ranks of Northern Army Parade Before National Commander.

Grand Rapids Mich., Sept. 14. (UP.)—Fading shadows of a host that marched southwards more than three score years ago, 1500 blue garbed survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic paraded before their commander today.

Some rode in automobiles, but more than half of them marched and they mustered what pep the passing years had left them.

Backs long bent tried to straighten up and feet that dragged attempted a comeback to the regulation infantry step. But orama of once lusty youth broken orama of one lusty youths broken on the wheel of time.

Commander-in-Chief Frank A. Walsh of Milwaukee took the salute.

He was brought here in care of a nurse. More than 50,000 persons cheered the veterans as they staged their sixty-first parade.

Lines were drawn today for the battle over the election of a new commander-in-chief. Probability of an east vs. west fight loomed large.

The eastern choice was Maj. Gen. John L. Clemm of Washington, D. C., better known as "Johnny Shilch, the drummer of Chickamauga."

The western favorite was Elbridge L. Hawk of Sacramento, Calif. Other men named were Silas H. Towler of Minneapolis, Patrick Coney of Topeka, Kas.; Frank Cole of Jersey City, N. J.; John T. Reese of Broken Bow, Neb.; and Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia.

Of the 10 Civil War nurses living, three are in attendance. They are Alice Risley, Columbia, Mo.; Mrs. Helen B. Cole, Sheboygan, Wis. and Mrs. Johanna Mellon of Salt Lake City.

Historic Figures

Among the veterans were many historic figures such as William P. Griffith of Brooklyn, the only living man who was under shell fire with Abe Lincoln; Walter W. Gorthy of Cadillac, Mich., who saw John Wiles Booth shot as he danced in the flames of a burning barn, and William L. Bailey, of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, who helped capture Jeff Davis.

NEW FIGHT SUIT

Another Move to Stop Dempsey-Tunney Bout is Rumored

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(UP.)—A new attempt to prevent the Dempsey-Tunney fight scheduled for Sept. 22, was reported to be under way here today, but the parties to the action professed to know nothing about it.

Floyd Fitzsimmons boxing promoter, said he had been served with a summons to appear in Circuit Court Sept. 19 in connection with an application for injunction to prevent the fight.

John Rosen, attorney for the Coliseum club and Elwood Godman, attorney for Dempsey, both said they knew nothing of plans for such a hearing.

Natural Bread

The breadfruit tree is native of the island of the Pacific ocean and of the Indian archipelago. This fruit supplies food and its inner bark a material for making clothing. When the fruit is gathered for use at an early stage the pulp is white and mealy and of a consistence resembling that of new bread.

Be Reasonable

"Sweet reasonableness" is one of the gifts most enviable, most to be coveted and cultivated. Goldsmith says of his village schoolmaster that, "even though vanquished, he could argue still," a sure sign that this high-spirited fellow was in quest of victory rather than truth.—Exchange.

TWO MORE FAMILIES QUARANTINED

The families of J. C. Carroll and William Walker on the farm of Cary Brown in Wayne Township, have been placed under quarantine until it can be determined whether any symptoms of infantile paralysis will develop among their members. They belong to the party in which Jacob Shull and family came to this County from West Virginia just before the quarantine was placed to prevent children under 16 from crossing the Ohio river. The condition of the Shull child who is suffering from the disease is considered very encouraging by Dr. Heffner, the County Health commissioner.

U. S. FILES NEW SUIT AGAINST DOHENY

Pomerene and Roberts Retained to Press Navy's Claim to California Leases.

Washington, D. C.—Announcement that a new suit had been started by the government against Edward L. Doheny's oil companies attaching their claims to three strip leases in the eastern end of the naval oil reserve No. 1, in California, was made today by the navy department.

The action is based on the contention that operation of these strips might drain naval wells on the reserve. Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, who prosecuted litigation growing out of the Elk Hills lease to the Doheny interests have been retained as special assistants to the attorney general in the case.

The strip leases cover 661 acres of oil land.

The department also announced it had received official notification from the special oil counsel that the Doheny companies had paid in full the court decree amounting to $13,013,151 in the Elk Hills lease suit. It is estimated that this payment brought the total recovery of the government from the Doheny lease to more than $33,000,000, in addition to reclaiming title to 30,000 acres of oil lands.

Earth Still Young

The earth still is just a kid, remarks Capper's Weekly. It has lived only one-half-millionth of its allotted existence, if the scientists haven't slipped in their figures. But, for that matter, we can't even imagine what life upon it would be like one hundred hence.

Castor Oil Plants

Vast fields of castor oil plants grow wild in Mexico, according to information received by the American Chemical society. There are two varieties, one of woody growth, whose seeds yield 30 per cent of oil, and the other of herbaceous habit, with seeds yielding about 50 per cent. The natives know the plant as higuerrilla.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS.

Wilmington college continues to strengthen its faculty by the addition of new faculty members, who fully meet all requirements of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools. The following persons have been recently appointed by President Henry G. Williams, to begin their terms when college reopens September 20:

Miss Elba F. Davies, B. S. and B. S. in education from the University of Cincinnati, is a recent addition from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. She will head the department of voice and will also be dean of women. Miss Davies is a lady of broad culture, thoro training and several years of successful experience. She has been very successful in voice and glee club or choral society work. She has had wide experience in handling girls' organizations. Her fine personality adds charm to her administrative ability. She is bound to become popular in college circles, and she plays the pipe organ, piano and other instruments. She will be in demand by churches and community organizations.

Miss Ruth McMurray, of Cincinnati, is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and is already well known in Wilmington college the past year, giving only a part of her time to the work. She will now give full time to piano instruction and will assist in the department of public school music. The piano department has been assigned a building to itself—The triangle, and there is every reason to believe the piano will be a popular course at Wilmington college.

But She Did Love George

By ADELAIDE D. HUFF

SIDE by side, their desks only a few feet apart in the huge office of the Mutual Protective Insurance company, George Harris and Alene Sumner had worked for over two years. They had early formed a pleasant friendship, for from the first Alene had been attracted by Harris' frank, boyish face that lit up with enthusiasm or looked comically doubtful according to his thought; but most of all she adored the trick he had, when puzzled, of running his hand through his heavy brown hair, often leaving a ridiculous wisp standing straight up. He was a product of the country, bred to the big city by the bright lights and the glamour and gaiety of which he had read so much; she distinctly and obviously was an urbanite. Yet there was much in common between these two. Straightforward, clean, ambitious, looking life squarely in the face without fear or flinching, they went through the hard day's work with a song in their hearts and in the short evenings played together like children out of school.

Alene had a convertible bedroom; that is to say, she could make her bed look like a cross between a wardrobe and a chiffonier merely by touching a spring and being careful to get all the bedclothes inside. In one corner behind a screen she had a gas plate and two or three cooking pans. So often after office hours they would stop in at a grocery and buy something to cook on the gas plate afterward. Alene would put an apron on George and make him peel the two potatoes which he would do with the utmost clumsiness and joy. After the supper was prepared, with a swish they would clear the little center table of its books and work basket and dainty cups and saucers would appear from behind the screen. Then they would sit down a little self-consciously, avoiding each other's eyes, but each one filled with a sense of expectancy.

It was at the fourth little supper for two that George put his hand across the table.

"Let's go on this way forever, dear," he said coaxingly.

Alene flushed and smiled as she timidly slipped her hand in his, and after that the creamy white mashed potatoes and the sizzling hot steak were left to congeal on the table unnoticed.

"But, George, darling, don't let's get married for a long time," Alene begged later. "I want to keep on working until we get enough to buy a little home of our own way out somewhere, and anyhow, we see each other every day and all day as it is, so why hurry?"

"Maybe you're right, dearest," he answered reluctantly, "but don't let's wait too long. Just think, it's that much happiness gone forever."

The months sped by on wings of happiness, but toward the end of summer there came a little rift in the lute. It had been a terribly hot season and the work at the office had seemed harder than usual. Alene had lost her pep and her joy in things. She loved her fiancé as much as ever but his running his hand through his hair somehow did get on her nerves. She felt embarrassed now when she would look over and see that absurd wisp standing straight on end. At supper in the tiny apartment one evening she involuntarily let out a little shriek of impatience.

"George, for goodness' sake, I'll die if . . ." then she checked herself. She didn't tell him. She just couldn't, for it was the very little trick she had once liked so much and she had often spoken to him about it. Was she going crazy? Didn't she love him any more? At the thought, hot tears welled up in her eyes, overflowed and ran down her cheeks. In a second he held her in his arms and was soothing her, his own heart thumping with fear and anxiety.

"You're overworked," he said.

"You'll simply have to stop and rest. It's just too much for a little thing like you anyway."

If only he would stop talking. If only he would go away, she thought. She tried to laugh it off, promised to be all right by morning and finally got rid of him. But next day she was too ill to go to work and kind Mrs. Jones downstairs insisted in calling in her doctor.

"Mrs. Jones has told me all about you," began the physician in a professional tone. "All you need is a rest. You're not going back to work, young lady. Run off to the country for a couple of weeks and no company, mind. You'll be all right then, nothing serious the matter with you but you do need rest."

Alene gave in and at last went away. Out in the cool, peaceful country she found rest for her jaded nerves. Each day brought her fresh energy and soon she was happy again, yet she counted the days until she could get back to George. One night, as she lay in bed in the dark thinking about him, she laughed aloud as she caught herself longing to see him run his hand through his hair as he used to do when puzzled. She was honestly homesick just to see him do it.

"And that was the very thing annoyed me most before I left," she mused in wonder. "Isn't it funny how overfatigue and nerves can make you almost hate the one you love the most. . . . Good, old Doctor Wilson. I wonder whether he guessed."

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

At Grand Rapids, Michigan, Thursday, By Acclamation—Came Near Getting the Post In 1926—Was Defeated By One Vote At That Time—The Honor Comes To a Former Resident Who In 1861 Was Instrumental In Organizing Company A, 114th O. V. I., Which Enlisted In This City—Was Well Known Here

Captain E. L. Hawk, who was honored by being raised to the post of commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., is well remembered in this city, as at one time he was in business here, later moving to the west. He is now a resident of Sacramento, California where is heavily interested in the raising of vegetables and fruits. His holdings were recently taken over by a syndicate and he is not actively engaged as he has retired with a competence.

The report of his election was good news to James Graham, of East Mound street, who is a personal friend of the newly made commander-in-chief. He and Captain Hawk served in Company A, 114th regiment, O. V. I. This company was mustered in at Camp Circleville on the David S. Ludwig farm. John Lynch was the first captain of the company and later Mr. Hawk was elected captain and returned with the boys to this city when the company was mustered out.

In September, 1922, the last reunion of the regiment was held on the old camp ground. Captain Hawk came here from the Golden State and made arrangements to entertain all the Civil War veterans. He paid the expenses of the reunion out of his own pocket.

At the same time he presented all the members of the Woman's Relief corps and the veterans a metal souvenir, bearing the picture of Colonel John H. Kelley, commander of the regiment.

Captain Hawk is expected here in a few weeks.

GAS EXPLODES BABY KILLED AT COLUMBUS

Cigaret Comes in Contact With Gasoline Being Poured into Car For Trip.

A gasoline explosion Thursday night caused the death of William Junior Klinkert, 2, of near Columbus and probably fatal burns to his sister, Mildred, 5.

Another child in the family, Walter, 16, was less seriously burned.

The tragedy overtook preparations for an automobile trip from the Klinkert tenant home on the Carson farm in East Livingston road, four miles southwest of Reynoldsburg.

Gasoline was being drawn from a tank for the car when a cigaret tossed near fluid that had leaked to the ground, caused a flare and explosion that wrecked the car and sent the three children rolling on the ground their clothing afire.

William Klinkert, father of the children, succeeded in extinguishing the flames and called for aid.

William Junior died a few hours later at home. The others were taken to Grant hospital by neighbors.

Mildred has slight chance for recovery, hospital authorities said.

Funeral services Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Chrysler, 3658 East 11th avenue. Interment at Gahanna.

Sweet Clovers Are Variable

Offer Opportunity for Development of New Strains for Definite Uses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All sweet clovers are variable in their habits of growth, and many individual plants of distinct type and form may be found in nearly any sweet-clover field. This offers an opportunity for the development of new strains of sweet clover for definite uses, according to L. W. Kephart, forage crop specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Better Hay Varieties.

There is considerable interest at present in the production of better hay varieties, he says, since the common sweet clovers, especially the white-flowered species, are too coarse and heavy to make good hay from the second year's growth. Several good hay varieties have already been developed, notably the early flowering Grundy County, Crystal Dwarf and Early Dwarf varieties of white sweet clover, and the Alborea and Switzer varieties of yellow sweet clover. Recently a type of sweet clover bearing many more and finer stems than the common sorts was found at two of the western Canadian experiment stations. It resembles alfalfa so closely that it is easily mistaken for that plant. This important discovery will no doubt add a distinct new type of forage plant to the present list.

The need for winter-hardy types has been met with the Arctic, or Hansen's Siberian, a white-flowered variety from western Canada. A sweet clover much better suited than the common sorts to the cold, dry climate of the northern Great Plains appears to have been developed at the Redfield (S. D.) field station of the United States Department of Agriculture.

On Acid Soils.

Several persons are endeavoring to find a sweet clover that will grow on acid soils, lack of lime being a serious hindrance to culture of the crop in many localities. Still others are trying to develop a strain suited to the drought and hot winds of the southern Great Plains.

A type of sweet clover that would be exceedingly useful, according to Mr. Kephart, is one that would remain green late in the fall, start growth early the next spring, and remain green and in good feeding condition well into the following summer. A number of experimenters, both on farms and at experiment stations, have approached this type with selections of common white sweet clover. Perhaps even better results will come from tests now being made with species and varieties brought from Europe and eastern Asia, one such species this year having remained green six weeks later than any sweet clover heretofore grown.

Sweet Clover Doubles

Wheat Yield in Dakota

J. M. Miller, who farms 1,800 acres in North Dakota, is an enthusiast when it comes to sweet clover. "Sweet clover," said Mr. Miller, "is the greatest soil builder ever discovered. One year I had a field of wheat. Half of this field had been in sweet clover the previous season. We took a crop of seed off of it and a large amount of hay, and then plowed the rest under. That part of the field which had been in sweet clover produced 35 bushels of wheat per acre. The other part produced 12 bushels per acre. The same variety seed was used and other conditions were similar."

Agricultural Facts

Soy beans with corn is an insurance against an imperfect stand.

Cull the slow-maturing pullets. They will be cull hens when they grow up, if they ever do grow.

The glazed stage is right for harvesting silage, but frosted corn makes inferior silage; better harvest too soon than too late.

Prices of dairy cattle are on an up-grade and they probably will continue to rise until about 1931 when they will reach the peak.

Silos are not expensive structures, so feeding capacity can better be enlarged by increasing the number rather than the size.

It is best to use an early nurse crop with sweet clover the same as with other legumes and the nurse crop should be sown thin.

Never take the chances of putting a slightly defective specimen in a plate of fruit or vegetables for an exhibit. The judge is more than likely to find it.

It pays to ring-face baskets of peaches, pears, or apples because then each fruit in the face gets its share of the pressure from the cover. Too the package sells better because it is

SYNTHETIC AGE

Germans Claim to Have Discovered Substitute for Gasoline.

German dispatches announce that synthetic gasoline is to be placed in the market at once; that an experimental plant in the lignite fields has proved so successful that "conservative authorities" predict that one-fifth the nation's needs will be met next year and that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has just signed a contract by which it co-operates in the development of the process. Officials of the New Jersey Standard state that one of the principal objects of President Teague's visit to Europe was to study the German discovery and acquire rights in it. A European expert speaks of "a new fuel era."

Perhaps the first glowing reports are to be discounted, but here at any rate is the evidence of another step in the production by chemical engineering of basic materials of commerce formerly obtained only from natural sources. Everyone knows how chemistry takes nitrogen from the air and dyes of all hues from coal tar. In the last two or three years synthetic ammonia, synthetic wood alcohol and synthetic acetic acid have demoralized the markets for the commodities. The production of rayon and other synthetic textiles has increased astonishingly. Synthetic lacquers are capturing the automobile industry. Synthetic production of gasoline and oil by-products from coal has always been recognized as not merely a possibility but a necessity as soon as petroleum fields began to ebb. Now, apparently, it is to begin at once to play a large part in the industry of nations which, like Germany have no petroleum deposits.—New York World.

Chic Fall Frocks for School Girls

Youthful and Smart Costume of Vital Importance to Young Miss.

The problem of clothes for school girls is one of the most important matters that faces the average household each autumn, for being well-dressed at school is half of being happy. The average girl finds it a very comfortable feeling to know that she looks right, and a misery to wear a dress she feels is even just a little wrong.

Being exactly right is not easy. A mere belt may spoil the whole effect these days when smartness counts for more than prettiness. Yet the smarter the clothes the more simple the lines, which means that dresses, even woolen ones, are easy now to make. It is just a matter of choosing the right pattern, one appropriate for the wearer's age and type.

The dresses shown herewith were chosen for the school wardrobe by Jane Warren Wells of the fashion staff of Farm and Fireside Magazine. They are youthful, they are smart, and the girl who wears them will feel well-dressed for almost any occasion.

In choosing the material Miss Wells finds that the new fall fabrics have "honest dignity." There are plain tones of warm brown and tan, dull red and navy blue, even black. The newest prints are small and of geometrical design chiefly. They seem to be a little more pronounced than the designs of early spring, yet they are subdued enough to be appropriate for frequent wear.

Among the woolens and fine cottons, checks and plaids abound. The fine woolens have many interesting weaves that add to their attractiveness, especially for the tailored dress. Plain flannels and kashas promise even greater popularity for the fall than they had during the spring.

Accessories are of course a part of every costume, and a most important part they play in the business of being well dressed. This fall, no matter what accessories you buy—shoes, hat, bag or hose—consider they are to be unusual in their simplicity. Nothing else counts so much.

In footwear, tan, light brown and black kid shoes have promised to be favored for conservative wear. These are really new because they have been out of fashion for two seasons, now.

Stockings have taken on a little darker tone for fall. They are just faintly lighter in color than the dress itself, except of course where the dress is very dark, then the stockings may be two shades lighter. Sheer stockings are worn for evening with the old yet once again new satin slipper. Satin is gaining favor over dress slippers of other types.

The slip-on glove, as simple as it can be made, is the order of the day. Wash chambray and tulle are appropriate for school wear, the heavier kid slip-on for hard service.

The small hat continues popular, yet many hats boast a small, flattering brim. The small antelope purse with shell or narrow metal top is chic and interesting and plenty large enough. For evening a shawl is the most attractive wrap the college girl can have.

Crystal beads seem to be the latest fashion but the younger girls are still showing their preference for pearls.

Umbrella Compartment in Under-the-Arm Bag

Paris, which is so used to rainy weather, has thought up another clever way of carrying the indispensable umbrella, or "en cas," as they call the short combination umbrella-parasol which accompanies the Parisienne during the months when rain is to be expected. This time the "en cas" occupies one compartment in a double bag intended to be carried under the arm. The top compartment has the usual fittings, purse, vanity case, mirror, card case and so forth, and directly beneath this is another pocket which accommodates the very short umbrella whose silk matches the leather of the bag. This unusual novelty comes in various colors and in the finest quality of ecru leather.

Essentials

A man must have the will to succeed, the brains to plan what path he will follow to attain success, the energy to pursue it, and the courage to batter down the discouragements that would block his progress.

PRACTICE OF THRIFT MEANS COMPETENCE

One of the Greatest Tragedies is to Become Dependent in Autumn of Life.

It can not be denied that the practices of thrift mean personal inconvenience at times. They mean that the truly thrifty man or woman must sometimes surrender the soft comforts and alluring pastimes which mean so much to many.

But it is much better to give up a few of these things during the years when we are strong and in good health than to face poverty and distress when our old years are upon us.

Thrift is an investment in happiness that pays large dividends. Present pastimes last for a day and are forgotten but the joys of thrift abide with us as long as we live.

Thrift is an insurance policy against failure.

Those who practice it consistently and truly may not gain the great heights of success but they will always hold an honored, respected place in the affairs of men.

One of life's greatest tragedies is to become a dependent in the autumn of life. Life's most poignant source of worry to many is the fear that when they shall have reached old age they shall be dependent on the pines and contentment of mind to bounty of others.

Conversely, there is constant happiness for those who practice thrift because they know that the serene days of old age will be lived in financial independence.

There is a world of difference between the outlook of those who are making no provision for the future and those who are slowly, steadily building up their personal resources. The difference is so great that one wonders how it is possible for any sensible person to drift along to certain failure when a comparatively small effort and sacrifice will place them on the roadway to independence.

THE PRESIDENCY.

One hundred and twenty million people are quadrennially convulsed in order to decide who is to have the honor of ruling them for the next four years. Hardly have they elected one president than they begin thinking of who is to succeed him. Hardly have they become used to one man in the White House than he announces that he does not choose to run again, or somebody else steps in from the opposite side political camp and a new administration is installed with a new point of view of doing things. The excitement and the uncertainty seem to suit the Americans. They prefer the bustle of change where we prefer the quiet of stability.

"But there is one thing the presidential system nearly always lacks—it lacks interest. Even if the choice of the electors fell on super-men instead of on the more or less amiable mediocrities who usually reach the White House, there would still be hardly time enough to get into human touch with sympathy with them before they disappeared for evermore from the official stage. The Americans do their best to manufacture an interest in their presidents, and for purposes of home consumption they frequently succeed. But can anyone imagine a Filipino, for instance, knowing anything or caring anything about the fugitive personalities who flit across the White House screen? He sees their names at the bottom of proclamations, but they mean nothing to him, have no associations either personal or traditional, and might just as well, so far as he is concerned, be a row of figures instead of letters."—The Sunday Times, London.

Long Family Homestead

Coursing westward toward Manchester, Conn., along an old highway at Ellington, the tourist's eye is caught by a dignified square brick house of a former period. If curiosity leads him to make inquiries, he will learn that this place, since 1717, has been the Pinney homestead, where seven successive generations of the family have lived and that the only deed ever given to the property is the one that the first settler of the town, Samuel Pinney, took from the Indians before building his log cabin in that year.

Relatives Kill Murderers

In Abyssinia murderers are executed in a little hut wherein they are tied to a post, rifles are trained on them through tubes in the wall, and the triggers are pulled by relatives of the murdered man.

Indians' Vanity Shown

by "Fake" Ornaments

The ancient Indian chiefs whose bones lie buried in Ohio mounds were not above making and wearing artificial jewelry when the natural materials were not readily available. Investigation of the relics of the so-called "Hopewell Culture," by Dr. H. C. Shetrone of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historic society, has disclosed a number of bone ornaments accurately and artistically carved in imitation of bear teeth. Bear-tooth necklaces were highly prized by this long-buried people. They accompany many of the more important burials. Only the long, tusklike eye teeth were used, and the larger ones were frequently inset with river mussel pearls as big as peas. Most of the teeth are of the common black bear, which ranged throughout North America, but frequently specimens are found of undoubted grizzly bear origin, which must have come by primitive trade routes from as far away as the Rocky mountains.

Patagonia, which is one of the great centers of sheep breeding, is in terrible trouble because of packs of dog-wolves which are destroying sheep by the thousand. These creatures are crosses between the native wolf and collies that have run wild. They have little fear of man and, indeed, have killed many shepherds. They are doing such terrible damage that the export of wool and mutton from Patagonia is rapidly decreasing.

The King's Head

Each succeeding British sovereign "looks the opposite way" to his predecessor on their coinage. This has been observed since the Restoration of Charles I, who expressed a strong desire not to look the same way as Oliver Cromwell. It was in the reign of Charles II that Britannia first appeared on the coinage, the original model being taken from a portrait of beautiful Frances Stewart, Duchess of Richmond.

AUBURN CAR RECORD

One of the Quaker Oats demonstration cars was in our city Thursday. This car has built into it a miniature of the famous system "FOODS SHOT FROM GUNS."

Mr. LeRoy Myers, the manager of the Quaker Oats demonstrating fleet was with the car and informed us that it is one of nine AUBURN cars used for this purpose and has traveled over the entire United States and into Mexico. This car has run over 135,000 miles and the Quaker Oats company is so very much satisfied with AUBURN service that they have ordered three more new AUBURN Eights for the same purpose.

HAMMEL MOTORS, of our city, has the sales agency for these exceptional cars.

Street of Money Kings

The center of the money power of the United States got the name Wall Street because so many of the large financial establishments are situated on Wall street, New York. This street got its name from the fact that in 1635, under the Dutch governor Peter Stuyvesant, a wall was built there to protect New Amsterdam from attack from the north.

AMUSEMENTS

Mae Murray, petite screen star, has added a new word to the English language.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, who looks as if she should think of nothing more serious than what gown she is going to wear with what shoes is really one of the cleverest women in the motion picture or any other business, and during the production of "Altars of Desire," now playing at the Met theater, discovered that the language was sadly lacking in one respect.

Someone on the set mentioned a certain scene that was being taken with regard to its "audience angle." It suddenly occurred to Mae that "audience" is no word to use in connection with a group of people viewing a motion picture, for Webster defines "audience" as being "a group of listeners or hearers."

"Audience, is taken from the Latin, audire, meaning to hear," says Miss Murray, "so why not follow the precedent and by using the Latin word videre, to see, the natural English derivation would be 'vidience.'"

If you are a real movie fan you will never mention a "motion picture audience," again, for you will not be in style and you will be essentially wrong. "Vidience," of course, is but a suggestion, and if anyone has a better one, Miss Murray is willing to hear it.

Conway Tearle has the featured male lead opposite Miss Murray in "Altars of Desire," which was directed by Christy Cabanne. The cast includes Maude George, Robert Edson and Andre Beranger.

An analyst says that married men are smarter than single ones. Maybe they have to be to get away with it. The idea is not that smartness was indicated in the marrying but was developed in the school of experience. It takes a smart man to maintain a wife in the manner to which she has accustomed herself.

Economizing for the purpose of being financially independent is one of the soundest indications of manly character. However to economize does not necessarily mean to do without the things you would like to own. Consider the great saving that may be effected by shopping around for best prices and paying cash as you go.

The City Loan Plan enables you to buy with cash, save money and build up a sizable bank account. From that time on your progress toward financial independence is rapid—you always seem to have money when you need it. SOVIETS HIT AT
HEAD OF MOSLEM*Russians Attack Islam in Samarkand, Quaint City of Central Asia.

Washington. — Samarkand, venerable city of central Asia, has been the scene of a series of recent clashes between the Soviet apostles of modernism and the conservative religious leaders of Islam.

The quaint city with the melodious native lies about 250 miles southwest of Tashkent, Turkestan, on the Trans-caspian railroad.

Perhaps nowhere in the Moslem world, except Mecca, could the Russians have invaded a more hostile territory to attack Mohammedanism, says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society. According to ancient legend, Samarkand was the head of Mohammedanism and Mecca the heart. Two Arab missionaries visited this region. Hungry, they cut up a sheep and put it on the fire to roast. While the meat was cooking they planned their work. They agreed that the one drawing the sheep's heart from the pot should go to Mecca, and that the one drawing the head should remain at Samarkand.

Samarkand is more than 6,000 years old and once had a population of more than a million. Today it has fewer than 60,000 inhabitants. The Persians once called it the hub of the universe. When Alexander the Great destroyed it, in 329 B. C., it was a prosperous city surrounded by a nine-mile wall, pierced by nineteen gates.

Famous Public Square.

After the Russians took the city in 1920, they built a new city outside its western limits. A long, wide boulevard, shaded by tall poplars, now separates the two settlements.

The native city is a labyrinth of narrow, crooked, dusty streets, bordered with dirty mud walls of courtyards and one-story houses. In the business blocks cluster dilapidated booths, cluttered with edibles and garments. Bearded men and veiled women crowd the streets, dodging camels, donkeys, droskies and high-wheeled carts, all mud-brown from the dust, while peasants, laden with produce from their farms and gardens, plod along to the public square.

Samarkand's registan, or public square, is one of the most famous in the world. It is the market place, parade ground and meeting place for the inhabitants for demonstrations of rejoicing and protest. Paved with cobblestones, it is inclosed on three sides by mosques where young Moslems are educated. The huge polychrome tile facades and melon-shaped towers, flanked with minarets 175 feet high, are splendid examples of Arabian architecture. Surrounding the courtyard inside each mosque are schools in whose cloisters, 10 by 12 feet, the students live with their instructors.

The fourth side of the square is occupied by ramshackle booths of odd pieces of lumber or tin, or strips of canvas on tall poles. They are filled with vegetables, fruits and other commodities. Near by are other booths where squatting natives sip coffee, smoke cigarettes, and gossip. As a public information bureau the oriental cafe serves the purpose of newspapers. Fortune tellers, professional letter writers and peddlers ply their professions where they find a shady place to sit. The registan also is the Samarkand employment agency.

Brilliant Garb of the Men.

From an elevated position above the surging mass of humanity the riot of color suggests that the natives vie with the rainbow and each other. A man will go hungry for a single garment of brilliantly colored material. Green, red, purple and yellow in all their hues will be seen on the same garment.

In a secluded spot in the old city, perhaps a half mile from the registan, is the tomb of the mighty Tamerlane, conqueror of Asia. It is an architectural gem, its graceful peacock blue dome rising above the dusty treetops.

A large park in the center of the Russian quarter is the hub of the new city, from which wide, well-shaded streets radiate in all directions. They are all paved to the city limits. Then they become mere trails in the desert. Some pass through masses of ruins of Samarkand when it was at the height of its prosperity. One of these roads leads to the citadel, situated on a hill between the two cities. Its wall incloses a subterranean prison, an immense dark chamber about 30 feet deep. Prisoners were let down by ropes and it is said no one ever came out of it. Grooves worn by the ropes can still be seen. The Russians abolished the old-fashioned method of punishing the offenders and have built clean, wholesome and well-ventilated jails.

AUBURNBreaks Closed-Car 2,000-mile Record

Then during night skidded in rain storm, turned over several times, received body repairs only

Then Finishes 15,000-miles at 62.709 M. P. H.

For more than 30 hours, averaging better than 65 miles an hour, this strictly stock Auburn Sedan had been whirling around the Atlantic City Speedway day and night.

Then came a terrific rain storm. Wet track. At 70 miles per hour the driver skidded, the car crashed.

Radiator and body repairs were made. Seven hours had been lost. But the Sedan went back into the test with the same driver. It caught up with the other two Auburn stock cars and finished the unprecedented distance of 15,000 miles.

After the accident, the car was declared non-stock, as it was no longer complete—exactly as sold, but its time continued to be officially recorded by the A. A. A. The longest, hardest and fastest official test ever given a closed car.

Unheard of as this performance is, it was only an incident in the 42,000 miles of official stock car test Auburn conducted, breaking all records for completely equipped stock cars from 5 to 5,000 miles, and establishing new stock car records from 5,000 to 15,000 miles.

The purpose of this extreme and hitherto unattempted stock car test, was to demonstrate by three times greater proof the supreme leadership of Auburn cars in speed, endurance, durability and efficiency. Your Auburn dealer has exact duplicates of the Auburn cars that made these phenomenal records.

About the middle of the second night this continuous run, when the track was wet as a result of a rain storm, the driver skidded. As a result, the car going at high speed skidded. It hit the guard rail and turned over. The sturdy construction of Auburn resisted this smash so well that only body damages resulted. The driver was unhurt.

Here is proof of stamina! After 7 hours for photographs and body repairs, this Sedan went back into the endurance test, driven by the same driver, and finished the remainder of the 15,000 miles at an average speed of over 67 miles an hour for the net running time for the entire distance.

Thinning Ranks of Northern
Army Parade Before National Commander.

Grand Rapids Mich., Sept. 14.—(UP.)—Fading shadows of a host that marched southwards more than three score years ago, 1500 blue garbed survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic paraded before their commander to-day.

Some rode in automobiles, but more than half of them marched and they mustered what pep the passing years had left them.

Backs long bent tried to straighten up and feet that dragged attempted a comeback to the regulation infantry step. But orama of once lusty youth broken orama of one lusty youths broken on the wheel of time.

Commander-in-Chief Frank A. Walsh of Milwaukee took the salute.

He was brought here in care of a nurse. More than 50,000 persons cheered the veterans as they staged their sixty-first parade.

Lines were drawn today for the battle over the election of a new commander-in-chief. Probability of an east vs. west fight loomed large.

The eastern choice was Maj. Gen. John L. Clemm of Washington, D. C., better known as "Johnny Shilch, the drummer of Chickamauga."

The western favorite was Elbridge L. Hawk of Sacramento, Calif. Other men named were Silas H. Towler of Minneapolis, Patrick Coney of Topeka, Kas.; Frank Cole of Jersey City, N. J.; John T. Reese of Broken Bow, Neb.; and Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia.

Of the 10 Civil War nurses living, three are in attendance. They are Alice Risley, Columbia, Mo.; Mrs. Helen B. Cole, Sheboygan, Wis. and Mrs. Johanna Mellon of Salt Lake City.

Historic Figures

Among the veterans were many historic figures such as William P. Griffith of Brooklyn, the only living man who was under shell fire with Abe Lincoln; Walter W. Gorthy of Cadillac, Mich., who saw John Wikes Booth shot as he danced in the flames of a burning barn, and William L. Bailey, of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, who helped capture Jeff Davis.

NEW FIGHT SUIT

Another Move to Stop Dempsey-Tunney Bout is Rumored

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(UP.)—A new attempt to prevent the Dempsey-Tunney fight scheduled for Sept. 22, was reported to be under way here today, but the parties to the action professed to know nothing about it.

Floyd Fitzsimmons boxing promoter, said he had been served with a summons to appear in Circuit Court Sept. 19 in connection with an application for injunction to prevent the fight.

John Rosen, attorney for the Coliseum club and Elwood Godman, attorney for Dempsey, both said they knew nothing of plans for such a hearing.

Natural Bread

The breadfruit tree is native of the island of the Pacific ocean and of the Indian archipelago. This fruit supplies food and its inner bark a material for making clothing. When the fruit is gathered for use at an early stage the pulp is white and mealy and of a consistence resembling that of new bread.

Be Reasonable

"Sweet reasonableness" is one of the gifts most enviable, most to be coveted and cultivated. Goldsmith says of his village schoolmaster that, "even though vanquished, he could argue still," a sure sign that this high-school fellow was in quest of victory rather than truth.—Exchange.

The families of J. C. They belong to the party in which Jacob Shull and family came to this County from West Virginia just before the quarantine was placed to prevent children under 16 from crossing the Ohio river. The condition of the Shull child who is suffering from the disease is considered very encouraging by Dr. Heffner, the County Health commissioner.

U. S. FILES NEW SUIT
AGAINST DOHENY

Pomerene and Roberts Retained
to Press Navy's Claim to California Leases.

Washington, D. C.—Announcement that a new suit had been started by the government against Edward L. Doheny's oil companies attaching their claims to three strip leases in the eastern end of the naval oil reserve No. 1, in California, was made today by the navy department.

The action is based on the contention that operation of these strips might drain naval wells on the reserve. Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, who prosecuted litigation growing out of the Elk Hills lease to the Doheny interests have been retained as special assistants to the attorney general in the case.

The strip leases cover 661 acres of oil land.

The department also announced it had received official notification from the special oil counsel that the Doheny companies had paid in full the court decree amounting to $13,013,151 in the Elk Hills lease suit. It is estimated that this payment brought the total recovery of the government from the Doheny lease to more than $23,000,000, in addition to reclaiming title to 30,000 acres of oil lands.

Earth Still Young

The earth still is just a kid, remarks Capper's Weekly. It has lived only one-half-millionth of its allotted existence, if the scientists haven't slipped in their figures. But, for that matter, we can't even imagine what life upon it would be like one hundred hence.

Castor Oil Plants

Vast fields of castor oil plants grow wild in Mexico, according to information received by the American Chemical society. There are two varieties, one of woody growth, whose seeds yield 30 per cent of oil, and the other of herbaceous habit, with seeds yielding about 50 per cent. The natives know the plant as higuerrilla.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS.

Wilmington college continues to strengthen its faculty by the addition of new faculty members who fully meet all requirements of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools. The following persons have been recently appointed by President Henry G. Williams, to begin their terms when college re-opens September 20:

Miss Elba F. Davies, B. S. and B. S. in education from the University of Cincinnati, is a recent addition from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. She will head the department of voice and will also be dean of women. Miss Davies is a lady of broad culture, thorough training and several years of successful experience. She has been very successful in voice and glee club or choral society work. She has had wide experience in handling girls' organizations. Her fine personality adds charm to her administrative ability. She is bound to become popular in college circles, and she plays the pipe organ, piano and other instruments. She will be in demand by churches and community organizations.

Miss Ruth McMurray, of Cincinnati, is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and is already well known in Wilmington college the past year, giving only a part of her time to the work. She will now give full time to piano instruction and will assist in the department of public school music. The piano department has been assigned a building to itself—The triangle, and there is every reason to believe the piano will be a popular course at Wilmington college.

Laborers Were Few

The Lord appointed other seventy, also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither He Himself would come. Therefore said He unto them, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few.—Luke x, 1 and 2.

But She Did Love George

By ADELAIDE D. HUFF

SIDE by side, their desks only a few feet apart in the huge office of the Mutual Protective Insurance company, George Harris and Alene Sumner had worked for over two years. They had early formed a pleasant friendship, for from the first Alene had been attracted by Harris' frank, boyish face that lit up with enthusiasm or looked comically doubtful according to his thought; but most of all she adored the trick he had, when puzzled, of running his hand through his heavy brown hair, often leaving a ridiculous wisp standing straight up. He was a product of the country, lured to the big city by the bright lights and the glamor and gaiety of which he had read so much; she distinctly and obviously was an urbanite. Yet there was much in common between these two. Straightforward, clean, ambitious, looking life squarely in the face without fear or flinching, they went through the hard day's work with a song in their hearts and in the short evenings played together like children out of school.

Alene had a convertible bedroom; that is to say, she could make her bed look like a cross between a wardrobe and a chiffonier merely by touching a spring and being careful to get all the bedclothes inside. In one corner behind a screen she had a gas plate and two or three cooking pans. So often after office hours they would stop in at a grocery and buy something to cook on the gas plate afterward. Alene would put an apron on George and make him peel the two potatoes which he would do with the utmost clumsiness and joy. After the supper was prepared, with a swish they would clear the little center table of its books and work basket and dainty cups and saucers would appear from behind the screen. Then they would sit down a little self-consciously, avoiding each other's eyes, but each one filled with a sense of expectancy.

It was at the fourth little supper for two that George put his hand across the table.

"Let's go on this way forever, dear," he said coaxingly.

Alene flushed and smiled as she timidly slipped her hand in his, and after that the creamy white mashed potatoes and the sizzling hot steak were left to congeal on the table unnoticed.

"But, George, darling, don't let's get married for a long time," Alene begged later. "I want to keep on working until we get enough to buy a little home of our own way out somewhere, and anyhow, we see each other every day and all day as it is, so why hurry?"

"Maybe you're right, dearest," he answered reluctantly, "but don't let's wait too long. Just think, it's that much happiness gone forever."

The months sped by on wings of happiness, but toward the end of summer there came a little rift in the lute. It had been a terribly hot season and the work at the office had seemed harder than usual. Alene had lost her pep and her joy in things. She loved her fiancé as much as ever but his running his hand through his hair somehow did get on her nerves. She felt embarrassed now when she would look over and see that absurd wisp standing straight on end. At supper in the tiny apartment one evening she involuntarily let out a little shriek of impatience.

"George, for goodness' sake, I'll die if . . ." then she checked herself. She didn't tell him. She just couldn't, for it was the very little trick she had once liked so much and she had often spoken to him about it. Was she going crazy? Didn't she love him any more? At the thought, hot tears welled up in her eyes, overflowed and ran down her cheeks. In a second he held her in his arms and was soothing her, his own heart thumping with fear and anxiety.

"You're overworked," he said. "You'll simply have to stop and rest. It's just too much for a little thing like you anyway."

If only he would stop talking. If only he would go away, she thought. She tried to laugh it off, promised to be all right by morning and finally got rid of him. But next day she was too ill to go to work and kind Mrs. Jones downstairs insisted in calling in her doctor.

"Mrs. Jones has told me all about you," began the physician in a professional tone. "All you need is a rest. You're not going back to work, young lady. Run off to the country for a couple of weeks and no company, mind. You'll be all right then, nothing serious the matter with you but you do need rest."

Alene gave in and at last went away. Out in the cool, peaceful country she found rest for her jaded nerves. Each day brought her fresh energy and soon she was happy again, yet she counted the days until she could get back to George. One night as she lay in bed in the dark thinking about him, she laughed aloud as she caught herself longing to see him run his hand through his hair as he used to do when puzzled. She was honestly homesick just to see him do it.

"And that was the very thing annoyed me most before I left," she mused in wonder. "Isn't it funny how overfatigue and nerves can make you almost hate the one you love the most. . . . Good, old Doctor Wilson. I wonder whether he guessed." (Copyright.)

The Amateur Profession

A professional pugilist said the other day:

"I've got nothing against amateur sport. There's a lot of money in it. 'What profession, son, do you desire to take up when you're a man?' a Los Angeles banker asked his little boy.

"The profession of an amateur athlete," the little boy answered."

G. A. R. AGAIN
IS REVIEWED

Thinning Ranks of Northern
Army Parade Before National Commander.

Grand Rapids Mich., Sept. 14.—(UP.)—Fading shadows of a host that marched southwards more than three score years ago, 1500 blue garbed survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic paraded before their commander to-day.

Some rode in automobiles, but more than half of them marched and they mustered what pep the passing years had left them.

Backs long bent tried to straighten up and feet that dragged attempted a comeback to the regulation infantry step. But orama of once lusty youth broken orama of one lusty youths broken on the wheel of time.

Commander-in-Chief Frank A. Walsh of Milwaukee took the salute.

He was brought here in care of a nurse. More than 50,000 persons cheered the veterans as they staged their sixty-first parade.

Lines were drawn today for the battle over the election of a new commander-in-chief. Probability of an east vs. west fight loomed large.

The eastern choice was Maj. Gen. John L. Clemm of Washington, D. C., better known as "Johnny Shilch, the drummer of Chickamauga."

The western favorite was Elbridge L. Hawk of Sacramento, Calif. Other men named were Silas H. Towler of Minneapolis, Patrick Coney of Topeka, Kas.; Frank Cole of Jersey City, N. J.; John T. Reese of Broken Bow, Neb.; and Samuel P. Town of Philadelphia.

Of the 10 Civil War nurses living, three are in attendance. They are Alice Risley, Columbia, Mo.; Mrs. Helen B. Cole, Sheboygan, Wis. and Mrs. Johanna Mellon of Salt Lake City.

Historic Figures

Among the veterans were many historic figures such as William P. Griffith of Brooklyn, the only living man who was under shell fire with Abe Lincoln; Walter W. Gorthy of Cadillac, Mich., who saw John Wikes Booth shot as he danced in the flames of a burning barn, and William L. Bailey, of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, who helped capture Jeff Davis.

NEW FIGHT SUIT

Another Move to Stop Dempsey-Tunney Bout is Rumored

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(UP.)—A new attempt to prevent the Dempsey-Tunney fight scheduled for Sept. 22, was reported to be under way here today, but the parties to the action professed to know nothing about it.

Floyd Fitzsimmons boxing promoter, said he had been served with a summons to appear in Circuit Court Sept. 19 in connection with an application for injunction to prevent the fight.

John Rosen, attorney for the Coliseum club and Elwood Godman, attorney for Dempsey, both said they knew nothing of plans for such a hearing.

Natural Bread

The breadfruit tree is native of the island of the Pacific ocean and of the Indian archipelago. This fruit supplies food and its inner bark a material for making clothing. When the fruit is gathered for use at an early stage the pulp is white and mealy and of a consistence resembling that of new bread.

Be Reasonable

"Sweet reasonableness" is one of the gifts most enviable, most to be coveted and cultivated. Goldsmith says of his village schoolmaster that, "even though vanquished, he could argue still," a sure sign that this high-spirited fellow was in quest of victory rather than truth.—Exchange.

TWO MORE FAMILIES
LIES QUARANTINED

The families of J. C. Carroll and William Walker on the farm of Cary Brown in Wayne Township, have been placed under quarantine until it can be determined whether any symptoms of infantile paralysis will develop among their members. They belong to the party in which Jacob Shull and family came to this County from West Virginia just before the quarantine was placed to prevent children under 16 from crossing the Ohio river. The condition of the Shull child who is suffering from the disease is considered very encouraging by Dr. Heffner, the County Health commissioner.

U. S. FILES NEW SUIT
AGAINST DOHENY

Pomerene and Roberts Retained
to Press Navy's Claim to California Leases.

Washington, D. C.—Announcement that a new suit had been started by the government against Edward L. Doheny's oil companies attaching their claims to three strip leases in the eastern end of the naval oil reserve No. 1, in California, was made today by the navy department.

The action is based on the contention that operation of these strips might drain naval wells on the reserve. Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, who prosecuted litigation growing out of the Elk Hills lease to the Doheny interests have been retained as special assistants to the attorney general in the case.

The strip leases cover 661 acres of oil land.

The department also announced it had received official notification from the special oil counsel that the Doheny companies had paid in full the court decree amounting to $13,013,151 in the Elk Hills lease suit. It is estimated that this payment brought the total recovery of the government from the Doheny lease to more than $33,000,000, in addition to reclaiming title to 30,000 acres of oil lands.

Earth Still Young

The earth still is just a kid, remarks Capper's Weekly. It has lived only one-half-millionth of its allotted existence, if the scientists haven't slipped in their figures. But, for that matter, we can't even imagine what life upon it would be like one hundred hence.
